

PLANNED GRAZING

to get more grass, water, soil health -- and PROFIT -- from your land

A WORKSHOP FOR RANCHERS AND GRAZING MANAGERS

March 30-April 1 | 2016 | Lindcove Research & Extension Center (near Exeter, CA)

Puzzled by terms like “holistic management?” “Regenerative grazing?” “Short-duration intensive rotations?” Wondering how to help your rangelands recover from three years of historic drought? Want more rewards from your livestock operation?

THIS WORKSHOP IS FOR YOU!

DAY 1 Wed., Mar. 30

- Introduction to principles and benefits for ranchers of whole-system management.
- Allan Savory framework for Planned Grazing.

DAYS 2-3 Thur. Mar. 31-Fri. Apr 1

- Practical individualized exercises to help you apply holistic management tools to your own operation.
 - Site visits with local ranchers.
- (Day 1-only option available; registration form on back)*

Instructor Richard King, Rangeland Manager

Richard spent 36 years helping western landowners restore and enhance their rangelands, wetlands, and stream corridors during his career with the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service. Since retiring in 2012 he has focused on sharing the Holistic Management decision-making framework developed by Allan Savory. Richard has applied the framework to his family’s small farm, gradually converting it from an annual-dominated dry farm to a profitable, biologically rich grass-finished beef operation. He has professional certifications from Holistic Management International, the Savory Institute, the California Board of Forestry and Fire Protection, and the Society for Range Management.

“Holistic Planned Grazing isn’t some New Age thing; it’s a decision-making framework for managing complex systems to get more of what you want.”
